Market

Rapid economic growth in Southeast Asia is increasing healthcare demand, leading to greater government investments in service access and infrastructure.

For Malaysia, the healthcare system includes a mix of public and private facilities, with the private facilities accounting for 34% of total hospital beds. In 2022, Malaysia's GDP growth reached 8.7%, highlighting a focus on elderly care and chronic disease management due to an aging population.

To address these challenges, both sectors are utilizing advanced technologies and improving preventive services, particularly in remote areas. Future investments will prioritize pharmaceuticals, medical devices, and digital health to enhance services and foster comprehensive sector growth.
